After exiting International Terminal of Haneda Airport (羽田空港), you can see the above sign and take the monorail (モノレール) to Hamamatsucho (浜松町), then transfer to Yamanote Line (山手線) to Tokyo Station (東京站). It takes 30 minutes from Haneda Airport (羽田空港) to Tokyo Station (東京站).

You can arrive at Tokyo station by taking the Shinkansen Northeast Morioka (東北新干线).

Signs in most of Japan Stations are basically displayed in Chinese or English. If you have any questions, you can seek the station staff for consultation.

After exiting International Terminal of Haneda Airport (羽田空港), right at the entrance to the monorail, there is a travel service center where you can redeem or purchase a JR PASS.

Shinkansen tickets can also be purchased at the artificial green window set up here or at the vending machine, and Shinkansen seats can be designated (you can buy Shinkansen tickets from Tokyo to Morioka).

The reference routes from Haneda Airport (羽田空港) to Tokyo are as follows:

From Haneda Airport (羽田空港) to Shinagawa Station (品川站), by Keikyu Express (京急空港線); then transfer to Yokosuka Line (横须贺线) and arrive at Tokyo Station (东京站) (as shown in the left side).

From Haneda Airport (羽田空港) to Hamamatsucho Station (浜松町), by monorail; then transfer to Yamanote Line (山手线) and arrive at Tokyo Station (东京站) (as shown in the picture on the right side).

The departure Terminals in Haneda Airport may be different for different international flights, it is recommended to check your specific landing terminal information before departure. Haneda Airport Terminals have a free transfer by shuttle bus.

If you take the Keikyu Expressee (京急空港線) and transfer to Yamanote Line (山手線) at Shinagawa Station (品川站), note that Shinagawa Station (品川站) is relatively large and you need to walk some distance.
